

There are four Greek gods in this logic problem. You have to associate them with their respective Roman gods, weekday and domain to answer this question: Who was the Greek god of poetry?

1. Neither Aphrodite nor the god of War were called Mercury.

2. Zeus was worshipped the day after Hermes and the day before Venus.

3. Either Ares' domain was War, or he was known as Jupiter.

4. The god of poetry was either called Aphrodite or was worshipped on Wednesday.
5. Friday and Tuesday weren't good days for poetry.

6. Jupiter's day was two days after the god of War's day.

7. Mercury was worshipped the day before the god of Thunder.
